It will be seen from the above data that more books have been taken during the past year than in the preceeding year. This we regard as a favorable indication. It shows that Nesmith Library is duly appreciated by our fellow-citizens. Another favorable indication is, the fines, for the year ending March 1, have amounted to only three dollars and forty-eight cents. Those who read the books evidently heed that injunction printed on the book covers,—“Use Carefully, Return Promptly.”

During the past year we have received some pamphlets from the U. S. Government, and have had two volumes presented to us by the state.

If any By-Laws of the library contravene the free use of the books among our citizens, a petition signed by three legal voters, or more, should be presented to the trustees at their next annual meeting, setting forth the facts in the case, and it will receive favorable attention. Nesmith Library was designed to be used by every citizen of Windham. Go, then, to this treasure-house, and enrich your minds by reading the instructive volumes found upon its shelves.

Most respectfully submitted,

JOSEPH S. COGSWELL,

OF THE
SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE,
FOR THE YEAR ENDING MARCH 1, 1883

Another school year has flown rapidly by ; its record is completed and classed with the things that were. The results only can be ours. Ours, if it has been a year of prosperity and progress, to aid in building character, and benefiting others ; ennobling the human race and making the community better for our having lived in it. Ours, if it has been a year of inactivity and carelessness ; that seeing our imperfections, we should be inspired to better action in the future, and more faithfulness in the performance of whatever may be our duty. It is well if by experience we learn the importance of right living, the value of every pure thought, earnest endeavor, and cheerful emotion. Living in a community like ours, we do not, nay, we cannot live for ourselves alone ; our actions, our decisions, the very manner in which we demean ourselves, reaches out beyond ourselves, and influences others ; especially the youth, for good or evil. to lure them to wise, gentle and peaceful paths of life. or induce them to give loose rein to evil passions ; which will lead to opposition to good government, insubordination, helping thus to destroy the peace of society, together with our time honored institutions of good government. What picture can be more sad than to see the money so cheerfully given by the industrious yeomanry of our town, wrenched, as it were, from the grasp of mother Earth by the hard toil of her tenants, and devoted to the cause of education; squandered, worse than destroyed, by carelessness, inattention, or failure to appreciate the real benefits thus bestowed upon them so freely. If it is so, where does the difficulty lie? who is responsible? do not act a prominent part in the matter?

We should not forget whatever part we take, for or against the teacher, or the school, in the presence of our children, will in nine cases out of ten show itself at school, in favor of good government, and a healthy, prosperous term, or on the other hand, tend sadly to depress and retard the progress, if not to ruin what otherwise would have been a successful school.

The real interest that parents take in our schools, cannot always be reckoned by the number of visits they make to them, but let us see the record of the scholars attendance and punctuality, as well as promptness, (and in this respect, we are happy to report, our schools for the past year, take an encouraging position, and in some respects the front rank,) and we can determine the interest taken by the parents.

IN REGULAR ATTENDANCE

many of our terms rank high.

Both teachers and scholars deserve much praise for the interest manifested in the welfare of the school, as well as in each other.

TARDY MARKS.

Some of the schools have been closed, much to the credit of all connected, without a single mark for tardiness, which, as far as my memory extends, is the first record of the kind in town.

This is true of the scholars permanently residing in Districts Nos. 2, 4 and 7, which surely elicits high commendation.

In Districts Nos. 2, 5 and 7, some very good specimens of drawing were exhibited, thereby displaying cultivated taste, careful training, and close application.

Singing was not entirely neglected in our schools, but we wish it might have a more general place in the exercises.

TEACHERS.

Our corps of teachers for the year, has been largely composed of those who were in the service for past years; if not in the same, in other districts in the town; thereby bearing testimony that their valuable services were appreciated by the inhabitants. In all our districts save one, the person employed in the Spring has continued through the year, thus showing much wisdom on the part of those who had the matter in charge.

Faithful growing teachers, whereas those who have attained to the height of their ambition, let it be the zenith, or other point, and allow themselves to settle at ease in their glory, may be discharged with safety at any time.

Teachers above all others, should be alive, active and constantly growing. Their work is largely in forming the character, developing and strengthening the young mind, giving it direction, and a healthy action, in short, preparing it for what it ever expects, or hopes to be in after life; so that as time rolls on, and it steps out on to life's broad stage of action, it will be well fitted for any calling, or position in life, and it will not be required to wait long for a high position to present itself to be filled. Would that all our youth could thus be furnished with strong minds, and willing hands for life's duties.

Looking from a selfish stand-point, we REGRET to learn that some of our teachers, who have labored with us the past year and some for a succession of years have concluded to lay aside the teachers' wand for a new, but equally laudible vocation. May their future lives be as peaceful and happy, as were their efforts in the school-room, gentle and successful, each succeeding term witnessing fresh laurels to crown the teachers' brow; neither were the scholars unmindful of the benefits to be derived from their faithfulness, as shown by the testimonials bestowed.

SCHOLARS.

The schools is a miniature community or state, if you please, by itself, gentleness and quietness should be the ruling motive power, nevertheless, firm resolves with energetic action, should be seen and felt in every day life. Then good recitations, correct deportment, polite, manly and lady-like action, both in school, and out, by the way to and from school, together with good scholarship and steady progress will be the result. All of the above, it has been my pleasure to witness in most of our schools the past year, and allow me here to express thanks to the scholars, for their pleasant smiles, and kindly greetings, which have shown a healthy atmosphere in and around the school-room, whether the space has been large or small.

Some of the evils still exist that were common fifty years ago, in kind, if not in degree, one of which is

and it certainly is a very great evil to not only those who practise it, but in a more or less degree to the whole school, causing the interest in the exercises of the school to lag and drag heavily, and the scholar who is allowed to follow in such a course, can never become proficient in any branch. Time is lost, money thrown away, and bad habits formed, we should contest, inch by inch, every evil that makes its appearance to the injury of our schools, whether new or old, as though it were a personal enemy warring against our individual welfare.

It may be said "hints," "remarks," "suggestions," may be stale and threadbare ; it is required none the less that there should be, "line upon line, and precept upon precept." It may be truthfully said, that, with few exceptions, our schools have been quite successful, that good order has been maintained in and of themselves, and that very good progress has been made in all the branches taught. In the several terms where this has been the case, it has been the natural result, not only of placing a competent teacher in the school-room, but of the sustaining influence of parents, and cheerful obedience of the scholars. An opposite course will surely bring opposite results. A continued attempt, even, to violate the rules of the teacher will never fail to terminate in disaster. A very few only may be concerned in disorderly proceedings: the pernicious influence will be felt by the innocent majority, who thus receive a serious and lasting injury.

The means and facilities for the education of the young, if rightly employed, were never so good as now. The school-books of the present day, far surpass those of forty or even twenty-five years ago; besides the character of the school-houses, with the surroundings, added to the general interest awakened in the minds of the community generally, all combine to leave no excuse for a youth not to become a good scholar.

The committee would here call attention to the subject of reading as the one most neglected branch with which teachers and scholars have to do. Our schools do not take the stand they ought in this respect; although for the past two years there has been very creditable advancement in this direction; still, there is room for great improvement. The reading is too rapid and indistinct; these faults cover many others, and if indulged in by the scholars and allowed by the teachers, precludes the possibility of any reform whatever. The scholar who habitually reads with great rapidity, neglects the many qualities that constitute a good reader.

It cannot be denied that teachers have some responsibility in this matter. If they cannot teach elocution in its highest forms, they surely can demand a certain moderation that will in itself lead to other points of improvement, and give us very much better readers than we now have. It certainly is worthy the attempt. Then let parents assist in the matter, and encourage their children to make thorough work with one reader, before grasping the next.

There must be a radical change in this matter before we have thorough scholarship.

SCHOOL-ROOM FURNITURE.

Most of our school-rooms have outline maps, and all have a large map of our State, all of which should be in constant or daily use, while the schools are in session; the time was, when schools vied with each other to see which could recite with the most fluency from the outline-maps; then geography was fixed in the mind throught the medium of the eye, a very good method.

Two of the school-rooms are supplied with globes of a small size. Some have large dictionaries, and some the remains of what were dictionaries, and some are destitute of either.

That these should all be supplied for each school, would be, I think by any candid mind, considered not at all superfluous, but simply an act of wise economy. We certainly shall be safe in making some sacrifice for an institution so lasting in its beneficial influence as the common school.
